3. If interested in exploring investing in EB, I =an put you in touch with Adriaan, who lives in Amsterdam.

Are any of these appealing? I prefer 1 to 2. I think a=face to face version of 3 could be arranged either here or there.

Let me know.

Hello Jeffrey,

I'm glad that Martin has put us in touch for a couple of reasons. First, I think we have some mutual interests concerning the implications of doing experiments with humans, rather than plants or animals or tires. One complication is noncompliance with the assigned treatment, which we briefly discussed at the dinner, but the more interesting one is the placebo effect, which can be gigantic, for example in "via=ra" type studies, which we didn't get around to discussing=except indirectly in the context of the Emotional Brain (EB) female viagra=issue.

More generally, this is related to FDA standards for approving drugs= A slight aside: in January I'm one of three people getting=honorary degrees from the Medical Faculty of the University of Uppsala in Sweden, where one of the others is Robert Califf, the current Commissioner of the FDA (the other is Marcia McNutt, the current President of the National Academy of Sciences), so I should get the chance to bend his ear at various meals (a former commissioner — under Bush II — was a partial PhD student of mine when he was getting his MD at Harvard and his PhD in Econ at MIT, and remains a good friend: Mark McClellan, who is interested in this stuff and remains quite influential in DC, I think).

But the reason for rambling about the FDA and placebo effects is the following. This morning I just had an exchange of emails with the CEO of EB, whom I've known and worked with for about three years, Adriaan Tuitman. He wrote that FDA has agreed with EB's proposal for more trials, and the EB board of directors just approved the issuance of about 12 million=Euros in stock to pay for these trials. Adriaan thinks that they may=have enough connections now, but would you be interested in participating?=C2=A0 I already have some stock, which I earned through consulting. = think EB is interesting but still needs more wisdom when it comes to their= statistics (I've been to FDA with them two or three times, and I think they still need help with some of their ideas e.g., using SNPs).=A0 If interested in tossing some money their way, let me know.

In any case, I very=much enjoyed our last conversations, and I look forward to seeing you again, either in Cambridge or in NYC, which I'll probably get to in the=next couple of weeks.

Best wishes, Don
