I =m waiting for my engineer to reply back to me as just came back last =ight from Europe. I will hopefully find out today (based upon if he =tained his notes from the preliminary system =iscussions).

Yo= have dedicated 110vAC power on the aircraft that supports the L/H =alley microwave, the R/H galley coffee maker and various outlets in the =ain cabin that are generally used for low consumption electronics , =uch as phone chargers, lap tops and other small personal electronic =evices.

I =ecognize that you are frustrated, but this information is easily =dentified and found in the aircraft's Electrical Load Analysis =inder.

La=ry, you must have it in the hangar with the rest of your manuals or =orse case down at Gulfstream when they were performing the cockpit =ionics work.

eric we have 12 sockets all 110 on the plane, . with enough capacity , for all to be operated at the same time. this makes no sense. you told me we couldn't have a 110 system, until now i have no real numbers.
