Jeffrey,=/o:p>

</=:p>

We brought =he fwd L/H seat in the aircraft to lay out the outlets in the lower =ide panels.

</=:p>

When doing =o, we noticed that the chair was further inboard (to the center of the =ircraft) than the average due to the restyled seat and arm =ests.

</=:p>

We brought =he rest of the seats into the aircraft to gain a complete =erspective.

</=:p>

The FAA =andates that there be 20" of clearance between furnishings - =measured 25" and higher from the floor.

</=:p>

The top of =he arm rest elevation is just below the 25" =ark.

</=:p>

The problem =hat we identified is that we do not achieve the mandated 20" =between furnishings (in this case the seat backs) until a point =.5" above the top of the arm rest.

</=:p>

On a side =ote, I need to mention that by making each of the arm rest on the seats =" wide, we have lost a total of 4" of aisle space between =he #1 R/H & L/H Aft facing single seats and the #2 R/H (your seat) =nd L/H fwd facing single seats in the fwd cabin =rea.

</=:p>

Five of my =uys walked through from the entryway through the fwd cabin and although =here is 4" less aisle space than customary at the 4 fwd seats in =he front of the cabin, no one found it =ncomfortable.

</=:p>

The bottom line is that legally we have to increase the space that starts at .5" above the arm rests by about 2" to achieve the required 3" clearance.

</=:p>

The attached = page pdf shows a picture of the fwd 2 seats in the aircraft which =should provide you with a visual perspective and a means of reference =or our anticipated discussion.

</=:p>

The end page illustrates how we propose to taper the backrest of the seats to gain the required 20" clearance between the seats.

</=:p>

We spent most of the day looking, reviewing, measuring and discussing solution scenarios.

</=:p>

I recognize that it is late, but please feel free to call me tonight or obviously in the office tomorrow morning (cell [REDACTED], Home =16.922.2828).

</=:p>

Sincerely,

</=:p>

</=:p>

Eric
