Jeffery,

I read about Tom Barrack in NY Magazine this past issue, fascinating guy. I think he's who you were talking about the other day. I see he's already made some moves with Miramax. Its interesting his relationship with Rob Lowe. I actually gave Rob's brother Chad his big boost in directing television by getting him hired on Bones for multiple episodes...he turned out to be a great director for us.

I was thinking there are so many other depressed assets he could acquire that would have entertainment value over the years. Classic musicals, feature remakes that studios don't want to spend development on, children's programming stars & creatures (not already properly marketed and diversified) that can be sold at cheap kiosks all over the country, etc.

I hope your doing great as always ,and enjoy the holidays! We'll be here in a hopefully quiet and peaceful L.A.

Best,
Barry J
