It was good Jeffrey, thank you so much. But, honestly, I didnt like Paris. Didnt touch my soul. I dont know what definitely its about I dont like, its a bunch of things/actions. I bought a 2 days ride on a double deck tourist bus and it had an electronical guide in it. So I saw all sights of all the city, but missed your emails because of lack in connection. Im sorry about death of Steve Jobs, btw, he was genious in my eyes. Now Im back in Samarkand, and its more difficult to be here after I saw you. I cant see my road. I want to work, be helpful for somebody, but I even cant find no work I want, no scholarships for my study. All I do is learning English and started Spanish. But I dont know how the word "fuck" will be in Spanish, tho. So Im not a good student yet. But how I wish to be...all day in books. I recognized that I like the paintings of Goya, how do you look on them, who is your favorite?

How are you, Jeffrey? Back to NY? I wish u could come to Samarkand one day, I could show u a lot. Take care, miss you. And cant forget the way you made me feel. That special feeling.
