Rich

regarding this morning =onversation about the Rock Wall proposal and the Bosses concerns I wish =o confirm the following

The Various Mockups =hown to the Boss where constructed by Jose and his 6 crew, not by Zorro =ersonal
None =f the existing crew have the skill set to construct walls of this =ature, quality and in the required time frame

As discussed with the Boss on his last visit, as wall sections are completed, Zorro Personal would be performing irrigation and planting. In the mean time they are working on the irrigation at Lodge, which will be completed this week. Ranch Central Irrigation starts next week. Spring clean up and maintenance of all locations continues. As stated I am having a hard enough time to find qualified people (legal) to pickup rocks, the one guy I have sourced was via Jose.

Regarding the construction of the walls

Due to the small nature of the walls and the % grade the walls are to be built on, Jose is recommending footing and glue to hold them in place.

If the Boss feels this is not necessary, then we will construct walls without support.

Lastly if I felt comfortable self performing this to the required standard and time frame we would mostly certainly could.

Please advise on how we are to proceed

Regards Brice

Jeffrey

attached photos of wall 18W x 12H

also sketch of new lay out, the second page is for obtaining final grade.
Rock guys have sketch and I should have there build cost by Thursday.

attached photos of the first Wall =ock Up for your consideration Side Stacked using the existing block footing as an example, =his would be the quickest method.

The Dry-stack would have minor footing and no mortar, a lot =ore labor intensive and would use lot more material.

The Dry-stack wall height 24w x =8h,
One large dump =ruck load will do approx 40ft of wall which do you prefer, dry-stack or side stack

Attached drawing for your =onsideration

Can you =lease confirm the wall heights,

24W x =2H for outer mowed grassed areas
18W x 18H for middle beds stipa grass areas
18 W x 24H for center bed with =rees and lavender bed.

Is this OK =
