These numbers are base and low for an event like Woody I know, it's just that his audience has aged and not as relevant as let's say Lewis CK. I.e. me get some comparative numbers for you tomorrow.

Apple TV hasn't done this exact thing and neither has Amazon. This is a quote from an Amazon exec friend of mine: "No not yet. We almost did with Bill Murray=Christmas special. We would be interested but I think it needs to feel like a huge event." Maybe Woody would be that kind of an event.

I still think a sale to HBO for this kind of a live performance is the first stop to try and get an advance of 1M and 1M production costs? Then sell to Netflix second for streaming rights international? I'm not sure even if it's Woody that these numbers are achievable because his films are so brilliant yet limited. Another way to go is to do the live=show as a exclusive short off bway run, or on bway run, and then as a film=for Sony Pictures Classics who distribute his most recent films.

We can go direct to those.

Woody on HBO has a certain level of prestige to it. Plus they might pa= well for domestic premium cable. Bets would be for us to meet, organize a=d then shop it.

Yes, would be great.

Could be for HBO with a back up deal at Netflix. I've produced a lot o= comedy specials so he'd be in great and experienced hands. When I come in=late September we can all meet. Good?
