Are you doing something interesting, clever, or just plain useful with Wolfram technology? We'd love for you to share it at the 2014 Wolfram Technology Conference this October in Champaign, Illinois. The call for submissions ends Friday, July 18.

We expect to feature talks that highlight the Wolfram Language and the thriving ecosystem growing around it, including the new Wolfram Programming Cloud, Mathematica, Wolfram|Alpha, and SystemModeler.

Submissions are encouraged in (but not limited to) the following areas:

* Computational finance
* Cloud computing
* Data science
* Internet of things and connected devices
* Educational technology
* System modeling and simulation
* Signal and image processing
* High-performance computing
* Software development
* Social sciences
* Visualization
