Quick update from Hospital : moving arms and legs fully with exception of right arm which had reduced action.

With trach tube in he still can't speak but is managing to communicate using alphabet pointing.

I am trying to buy an electrolarynx out here so he can "speak" until the tube comes out.

He looks good - is feisty and frustrated about not being able to get on the phone and speak.

Looks like he will remain in ICU through this weekend when they can pull the tube.=/div>

Have not been able to talk to Chief Medico yet.</=iv>

He's not pretty but there is solid progress since I was last with him
