Panasonic as the KXNT400 shown below. There may be an issue with using these phones due to the wiring in the home. We'd have to make sure they can be supported in all locations.

This uses the same KSU already quoted, but it requires a few additional cards, a network switch, and the phones themselves are quite a bit more per phone. I'll have to price it out.

These phones take a while to get as well. We do not have them in stock other than one or two.

From my phone engineer;

"the TDE100 is the best of the best. It is the top of the line as of right now. it can handle ip stations, sip, or digital"

I've asked him to let me know if there are cooler options for the handsets themselves.

These are the most current models we offer =rom Panasonic . That is part of the reason they were difficult to get. =nbsp; We updated them from the models that were originally quoted =s you may recall. They are the most appropriate for the =nstallation as well.

We =ffer phones from NEC but it's not a better choice. =nbsp;

The Panasonic phones are =lso in stock now and ready to go for next week.

I'll price other options of course but they aren't really =etter .

I'd =old you that we are installing next week. The phones =re in now but I couldn't schedule this week until we saw =hem delivered.

The delay was purely on =anasonic. The phones were unavailable nationwide. It unfortunate, but there really is =o reason to change phone systems now.
