

Jeffrey Epstein, Education Philanthropist, Donates Critical Funds to the Largest Student Civic Organization in the US

The Jeffrey Epstein VI Foundation, which backs cutting edge science research across the country, has just provided critical funding to the Junior Statesmen Foundation (JSA), the largest political and civic organization for students in the US. The funding comes at a pivotal time in JSA's history. Just this month, the prestigious Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation partnered with JSA to offer a variety of ways to recognize students for leadership, integrity and citizenship skills. Every school member within the JSA will receive a packet with four Ronald Reagan Commemorative Coins, to be awarded to outstanding student leaders, four Certificates of Achievement and opportunities to have student leaders recognized in the Ronald Regan database of outstanding student leaders from across the country.

The Jeffrey Epstein VI Foundation was founded by Jeffrey Epstein in 2000 to support cutting edge science and has since expanded into supporting science education, early development and many other areas of learning.

The Junior Statesman Foundation was started in 1934 with the recognition that young people should have their voice heard in the fields of politics, civil and international policy. The JSA provides an unprecedented platform for students to exchange ideas through debates, think tanks and task forces. JSA also offers the chance for students across the country, to meet with one another, to explore and collaborate on policies they are passionate about and to meet with political and civic leaders.

The JSA Foundation is organized at the local chapter level and coordinate under the umbrella of regional chapters. The regions form states, which run three large conventions a year and come together under a national level of general program operations. The national headquarters are in Washington DC and in San Mateo, California. Any school can apply to the Foundation to set up a new chapter or coordinate with one.

"We are very pleased about the Ronald Regan Presidential Foundation's collaboration," Jeffrey Epstein affirmed. "Leadership should be encouraged and nurtured at an early age." In addition to founding the Jeffrey Epstein VI Foundation, Jeffrey Epstein is a former member of the Trilateral

Commission, the Council on Foreign Relations, the New York Academy of Science and a former Board Member of Rockefeller University. He is also the founder of The Program for Evolutionary Dynamics at Harvard University.
